SUGGESTION BOX

SUGGESTION: "That expert mess personnel attend cook school. They know how to make a mess. I also think that a lot of the boys will agree with this one. Some one should do something about those chow hounds that come down to the mess hall and buck the line every day."

ANSWER: That expert mess personnel has attended cook school. SB disagrees with you and thinks they do a good job. Action has been taken to prevent bucking the chow line. SB apologises for the inadvertent delay in publishing this suggestion which was submitted June 1.

SUGGESTION: "A majority of the men that are married over here don't want to go home when their name is called to do so. By doing this, they know that they will be on the first of the next list, therefore they are taking the place of men that should go on that list. If those men want to stay, why not put them on the bottom of the list so that men that want to go home can go when it comes their time."

ANSWER: The correspondent is probably unaware of the fact that the next man in line is substituted for any person who temporarily forfeits his chance for discharge, thereby giving the man with fewer points a chance for an earlier release.
